Bigger and Better Than Ever

The Fall Fair and Sports Day for 1910 is now an event of the past and it will remain in the memories of the big crowd present as the best that Didsbury has ever had. The weather, the attendance, fine exhibits, good sports and the orderliness of the crowd all assisted in making the 1910 Fair and Sports Day one to be remembered for years to come and will be hard to equal in coming years.

There were over two thousand people present, the gate receipts alone totalling $300, the members of the society, attendants and officers making up the balance.

The Fair exhibits in all classes were well filled and received a large share of praise from the great number of visitors present from Calgary, Olds, Carstairs, Bowden, Innisfail and other places, and were a revelation to those not thoroughly well acquainted with the Didsbury district and its possibilities. The horse, cattle, hog, sheep and poultry classes were all well represented and the judging caused a great deal of interest. The grain exhibit was not as large as it might have been considering the quantity of good grain that has been grown in the district this year, but the roots and vegetables were certainly hard to beat. The potatoes and cabbages being exceptionally large and of extra good quality. Last but by no means least were the ladies' exhibits. These were in one of the large tents provided for the purpose and made a pleasing attraction to the eye of the visitor, the lady directors in charge showing great taste in displaying the exhibits and the flowers, fruits, and the bright colors of the different classes of work made one of the drawing cards of the day, the tent being at all times packed to the entrance.

The Neapolis band and some negro songsters helped to enliven proceedings considerably and everybody appeared to enjoy themselves to the full. Owing to lack of space in this issue we are unable to publish the Fair prize winners but they will be published in full in next week's issue. The sports were well arranged and reflect great credit on the different committees who had charge of them, some of the horse races especially causing surprise and fun. The children's races were not pulled off as there did not seem to be any who wanted to compete, no doubt they were too much interested in the other events. The tug of war for the Golden West Silver Cup did not materialize, there being no competitors against the Didsbury team.

The Range With A Perfect Oven

The oven of a Sask-Alta Steel Range roasts and bakes perfectly. It is so constructed that the distribution of heat is always even. The turkey or joints cook to a nut-brown turn on all sides. The pudding, bread and pies always come out of the Sask-Alta oven evenly baked. Another advantage is size. It takes the largest joint or the biggest turkey—and four ten inch pies can be set side by side. Added to all this, the oven is properly ventilated so gas or fumes never affect food. The McClary thermometer always indicates accurately the proper degree of heat for any purpose. The nickel-steel lining can't bulge or warp—can't burn out; won't admit dust. Ask the nearest McClary agent to point out the many other points of merit found in the Sask-Alta alone. Write now for the Sask-Alta booklet. Address the nearest McClary branch.

Will Form Joint Stock Company

The men who curl the "stones," in other words the Curling Club, held another meeting on Monday night in the Sample room of the Golden West Hotel to receive reports from the committee appointed some time ago to get estimates on the buying of lots and the building of curling and skating rinks.

The committee reported that it would cost between three and four thousand dollars to put up a covered skating and curling rink, and about $1,500 to build a curling rink with enough land for an open air skating rink (this includes digging well etc.).

The majority of those present thought that the two covered rinks would be too much to handle at once and the meeting decided to erect a curling rink and purchase lots for an open air skating rink.

On motion, it was decided that a joint stock company be formed with a capitalization of $1,500; shares to be sold at $30 each, payable in three annual instalments. A committee composed of Messrs. W. Cunnison, J. A. Findlay and J. E. Stauffer was formed to canvass for shares and to report at a meeting to be held on Wednesday night. If any person who would like to take a few shares is not approached by the committee, they are requested to communicate with either of the above named gentlemen.

Several letters have been received from curling clubs all over the Province who state that the above method is a paying proposition, and consequently the members of the local club feel somewhat enthusiastic in the building of a rink, twelve shares being sold at the close of the meeting.

C. P. R. Branch Line from Kininvie to Didsbury Com- menced

The C. P. R. has reopened its land office for the next two months, and it is intended that Bassano shall be the sales headquarters for that company for the remaining part of 1910 and the whole of 1911.

It is also the intention, apparently, to open up 60,000 acres of non-irrigated land at the first of the month in the district, about twenty or thirty miles north of Bassano and east of Dead Horse Lake. The projected C. P. R. line from Didsbury, on the C. & P. R. line, on the main line, which the Kininvie, on the main line, which is now building, will run through this section, so that no part will be more than ten miles at the most from the railway.—Albertan.

A Positive Cure for Indi- gestion.

If you have indigestion, your food ferments in the stomach and bowels. It does more it leaves and the nutritious matter which should go to make new blood decays with it, and this leads to an impoverished condition of the blood, to nervousness, bad humours, constipation, skin blemishes, bad breath which digests your friends, and other disagreeable and unpleasant conditions.

And all this trouble is caused by the food that doesn't digest, but ferments and off-putters in the stomach. And fermentation is caused by the stomach not being strong enough and energetic enough to thoroughly mix the food with the digestive juices.

M-I-O-N-A is responsible for tens of thousands of cures. In fact, it is such positive cure for indigestion and stomach troubles that it is guaranteed by H. W. Chambers to cure or money back. The price of a large box of M-I-O-N-A tablets is 50 cents, and they are sure to promptly relieve the worst case of indigestion or gastritis. Try them.

Death the Fate of the Bubble-Riders

Drawing Lots For Death

The jug goes off to the left, but is pretty sure to get cracked at last.

IN Civil War times American and young Philadelphians, Washington D. C., who performed all sorts of hair-raising feats upon the tight rope and slack wire, which he varied with exhibitions of ventriloquism and sleight of hand. In the early '70's, responding to the lure of the air, he purchased a balloon, attached a trapeze and rope, and with this apparatus kept a goodly portion of the public in good cheer for a number of years. Finally he became connected with Barmen's Hippodrome, Chicago, where he made his one hundred and thirty-ninth and last ascension on July 12, 1875.

The balloon used for this voyage was the "P. T. Barmen," holding 5,000 cubic feet of gas, and on the day in question three men stood in the car awaiting the signal which should set them free. These were Donaldson and two Chicago reporters, Grimwood of the Journal, and Maxwell of the Post and Mail. But at the last minute the balloon was found to be overburdened.

Corps, ascended from Bath, England, in the government balloon "Saladin," accompanied by Walter Powell, a young Member of Parliament, still in his thirties, and Mr. Agz Gardner, a gentleman interested in aeronatics. The ascent was made at two in the afternoon for the purpose of taking meteorological measurements.

They cleared the snow clouds at 4,000 feet, and, rising higher, passed over several towns, and thence, two thousand feet farther up, into a bank of cirrus clouds, which they observed with their instruments. Having completed this test, they dropped near to earth and, after coasting about, found themselves too near the sea. So a descent was attempted, but in making it they hit the ground too suddenly, Captain Temple and Mr. Gardner being both thrown out and injured, the latter breaking his leg.

Free of their weight, the balloon instantly shot up into the air with Mr. Powell, who waved his hands to his comrades as the runaway started off to sea in a southeasterly direction. Having placed the crippled Gardner in charge of some men, the captain hurried to Bridport and telegraphed for a steamer to be made ready at Weymouth, whither he proceeded, finding his boat, and putting out in it at once.

All England was now agog. On every street corner the metropolitan news discussed the probable fate of the last Member of Parliament.

But just before embarking he received from the Bridport harbor master a wire stating that the "Saladin" had been seen to drop into the sea south of that port. Night was now approaching, and, hurrying to sea, the captain vainly searched the locality of the balloon's alleged disappearance, making due allowance for the wind and current. All night he scoured the English Channel, eventually crossing it. But the next day he returned disheartened. No sign of the "Saladin" or of its occupant had been seen.

The New Shocker in Operation

Mail had dipped in coin in the air and called "heads." He won, and Grimwood was about to leave the basket when the press-agent of the Hippodrome interfered and produced two slips of paper marked "first choice" and "second choice." Picking the helmet of a policeman's head, he put the slips inside and held it high aloft. Mail had lost this time, and stepped out of the basket, just before leaving earth, said to a brother scribbler:

"I care to go only this once, just for the experience."

So at five on that midsummer afternoon the "Barmen" rose gracefully from the Hippodrome to a height of a mile. Then it floated steadily to the southeast, out over Lake Michigan and in a direction which, if followed, would have taken it to Grand Haven, one hundred and twenty miles distant.

Thousands of people packed the lakefront to watch it as it sailed before a attendant breeze, but not until it had been up for an hour and a half did the great ball fade from their sight. Even then, hundreds, and hundreds, of the great, waited to see if perchance a counter-current might send it back.

Just as dusk was falling, the schooner Little Guide, standing some thirty miles off the Illinois shore, sighted the balloon and noted that it occasionally dipped until the basket touched the lake.

So the Little Guide made off in the direction of the aeronauts, although they were a mile and a half distant, and darkness was fast falling the gray space between.

But just before the boat could overtake it, a sudden lightning of the air, shot upward to a great height, where it disappeared in the night sky.

So the schooner came about and proceeded on its business.

That night, a furious hurricane swept down upon Lake Michigan, and all through the awful hours two terrified women watched from the barred panes of their windows. One was Donaldson's fiancée, the leading actress of the Hippodrome, whom he had made an affectionate farewell just before entering the balloon. The other was Grimwood's aged mother.

Prayer after prayer they sent up to their God as the lightning rent the heavens and the thunders rattled all the things of earth. They remained at their vigil until the morning disclosed a wet but peaceful world, and the waves had subsided until scarce a ripple disturbed its surface.

But a maddening month of suspense was to pass before any news should arrive of a despatch from Stony Creek, at Lake Michigan, saying that Grimwood's corpse had washed up near there.

His boots were off and a life preserver was about his body.

Donaldson's betrothal never was to learn of his fate, nor were two motherless children that he left behind ever to know where he meted his father's fate. His body was never discovered, and not a scrap of the majestic "P. T. Barmen" was recovered by the lake that devoured it and its master.

Swedish patent office and in his early forties when he supervised the completion of the "Eagle," a balloon that towered one hundred feet from its basket floor to the top of its bulging envelope. In the summer of 1897 he had it pumped full of gas upon the shore of Dese Island, Solberg, where a group of scientists gathered round to admire the ingenious equipment.

There was a closed canvas car, with windows through which Andrew and his two companions were to peer out over the polar landscape. Everything inside was snug even to a sleeping compartment with warm night bags of reindeer skin, and alcohol lamps for warming the daily rations. And tucked conveniently away, in cleverly provided places, were first-aid kit, charts, ammunition, guns, sextants, thermometers, cameras, and surveying instruments.

Then there were stored in canvas sacks all sorts of preserved food—cheese, compressed bread, concentrated milk, even the best Barmen's wine and champagne. There were also anchors, humps, and carrier-pigeons to bring back news while he waited was to trail over the ice, a long tail whose office, combined with sails, was to assist in guiding the balloon whither the aeronaut wished.

Thus four hundred miles a day were to be told off as the good ship sailed over the arctic wastes, and the north pole would be reached in forty-three hours, while at the end of that long day's journey, the "Eagle" would be crossed on the other side of the arctic circle. As forty to fifty days' supply of gas and food was taken along, it would then be an easy matter to sail down into some civilized region of the American or Arctic continent.

Andrew had called for volunteers, and a goodly lot of adventure-loving young Swedes had applied for a share of the honors of the most daring exploit yet attempted by man. From among them he selected two athletic fellows, Nils Strindberg, twenty-five years old, an amateur photographer, and a devotee of outdoor sports; and Knut Karsten, twenty-seven years old, a civil engineer, and a champion skier, and snow-shoe runner.

Small trial balloons were sent up on the day of July 19, 1897, and they sailed rapidly to the north, thus setting the poleward pace. Prayers were next sent up to the Lord for a favorable wind in the harbor, and then the balloon was inflated and its sled unmoored to let it

Then the wind pressed it down until the car dipped into the water, but it soon rose again, cleared the neck of an isle across the harbor, settled down to a steady progress northward, and vanished from sight at 3 p.m., where it was estimated about a half mile above the sea. Then the world waited thirteen and a half years for some news of Andrew.

and his "Eagle." It was a terrible vigil for the loved ones left behind by him and his little crew.

Finally, in January, 1910, there came down from the arctic regions of upper Canada a veteran of the frozen north, William Irvine, who had served the Hudson Bay Company for fifty-seven years. Touching at Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, eleven hundred miles below his trading post, he there told a strange story to the Canadian authorities, who detected it over to Sweden.

Shortly before leaving his trading station this aged man had been visited by an Indian from the Mackenzie River region. The red man told of having met, in the previous winter, a band of Eskimos laden with strange goods of quality and kind unknown to their parts, among these articles were instruments and fittings of brass, cooking utensils of ingenious workmanship, and a generous supply of cordage and of waterproof cloth. The Indian, upon questioning the Eskimos, heard from their lips this strange tale:

Once when hunting upon the shores of the Arctic Sea they had beheld to the sky a wondrous apparition, resembling a vast, oval, shining object, which it came down to earth, and there dropped out of it three white-faced beings, who sat down, and struck tent and pitched it to their hearts. The Eskimos signaled for the intruders to halt, but one of the whites, mistaking them for women, hastily, opened fire with a rifle. A light followed, and the Eskimos, after losing several of their own bravest, killed all three of the men from the sky.

For a while the people so feared the great "sonak," that upon questioning the Eskimos they were told that they gathered their courage and entered it, securing these strange things which the Indian

SAUSAGES TO HIS MAJESTY

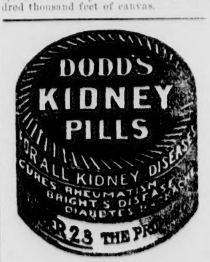

IN a certain small English village there were two butchers living in the same street. One prepared his sausages at one shilling a pound, and the rival promptly placed eight pence on his card.

Number One then placed a notice in his window, saying that sausages under one shilling could not be guaranteed.

Number Two's response to this was the announcement that he had supplied sausage to the King.

In the opposite window the following morning appeared an extra large card, bearing the words: "Sold Save the King."

Had Eczema on Legs For Twenty Years
Thinks no one could have it worse—Was cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

There are plenty more fatal diseases than eczema, but not many which cause more downright suffering. The tendency of eczema to spread over the body is annoying and discouraging, and the itching—the almost constant and persistent itching—nearly drives a person crazy.

You can scarcely wonder that people are enthusiastic over Dr. Chase's Ointment, when it brings them prompt relief and actually cures itching, tormenting eczema. And if you could read a few hundreds of the letters we receive from cured ones you would not be long in deciding what treatment to apply for eczema, salt rheum and similar skin diseases.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out of this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

THE TALE OF A CAT.

How a Toronto Merchant Made a Peddler Pay.

The other afternoon, in the haze of the best, not uncommon weather during in the streets along College street, in the district adorned by the residence of Col. Dundas.

In a shaded doorway stood one local merchant looking out into a hot and unrelieved world. There was little to see that was interesting, except that now and then a car clattered past the man in the doorway recognized an acquaintance among the passengers, with whom he hotly exchanged signals, admitting their mutual existence.

Presently along College street came a chester-toned sedan driven by a whitered collector of race horses and bottles. The driver of the vehicle was making good time, as if he had had of a place a mile away where he could get something for nothing.

As the vehicle halted past the store a cat, having for some reason of its own, decided that it wanted to cross the road, unasked to do so, but miscalculated in some way, and a wretched wheel crushed it to death. The driver, with a frightened look back at the slaughter he had done, struck his horse and shoved on the reins.

With a shout the man in the doorway sprang to the street, and he demanded that the driver of the cat should stop. Two blocks ahead a policeman emerged from beneath a shade and sauntered down, drawn by the angry shout of the merchant. The policeman, however, had done, struck his horse, declaring with voice, hands, and uplifted eyebrows that he didn't mean to do it and was not to blame.

"Why," said the shopman, "you are not having for a cat like that?"
"Wouldn't have seen that cat killed for five dollars."

"Not my fault," declared the vendor.
"Not your fault—not your fault! Whose fault is it? Was it my fault standing in my own store? Was it the cat's fault? Do you think it meant to commit suicide? Now, you've got to settle and settle quick."

"Here, here! what's all this?" demanded the policeman, who had just arrived.
"He's killed the cat and he's got to pay for it. I wouldn't have seen that cat killed for five dollars. It's got to pay two dollars to settle."

"Two dollars," exclaimed the peddler, appearing with his eyes to high heaven. "Two dollars for a cat?"
"Two dollars—that's what!"

"It seems a bit high," commented the policeman, as he habbled to the sidewalk with an air which plainly said that he could outstare as long as the disputants kept the peace.

The two men haggled for a long time, but finally the peddler handed over a one-dollar bill and drove on his way, removing the cat for burial.

A number of persons had gathered as the dispute proceeded, and when the merchant entered his shop, one of them said to him: "That must have been a valuable cat. What breed was it?"

"I don't know," said the merchant. "You see I never saw the cat before. I didn't say it belonged to me. I don't know who owned it. The inspection came to me as I witnessed the accident." Then he smiled. "I didn't think I could get away with it. You see this dollar is to reimburse me for the mental pain I endured as an eye-witness of the tragedy."

A Magistrate's Duty.

The numerous utterances which Col. Dundas has made regarding the lawlessness of law are responsible for the fact that many people think that the law is a sort of happy-go-lucky criminal machine. It is true that there are no ideals set up for the guidance of the law, and the law is allowed to show their ability to joke or their ability to rule according to their turn of mind. However, while it is a fact that the chief magistrate gets along with as little law as possible, he has a system for conducting his cases. He gave his own idea to the duties of a magistrate some time ago while arguing with a lawyer over the merits of a case.

The lawyer in question was James B. Macdonald, "Certiorari Jim," who has won fame for himself in the local courts because of his intimate knowledge of legal subtleties and technicalities. When he tried to work up a police court practice, he found that the justice of law had no weight with the magistrate.

Col. Dundas listened to a lengthy protest from Mr. Macdonald, and then he remarked: "The purpose of law is to give me a fair trial and punish the guilty. If the law is not to allow thieves to escape through technicalities."

"That is not the idea at all," declared the lawyer.
"Well, I have given you my view of court," said the magistrate.

"When I took my oath of office, I promised to dispense justice with equanimity, wit and wisdom. But I remembered that some writer said cunning was the child of wit and fraud and I thought like like him, so I decided that when I presided in a court I would try to get along with the other two."

Take Their Flasks Maybe.
Col. Seely admitted in the British House of Commons recently that in certain native courts in Southern Nigeria fines had been received in gin, although the practice was abolished by law in 1901.

Notice—A bay mare branded W2 on right shoulder and weighing about 1,200 lbs., belonging to H. W. Watkins of Olds, y.a., taken from the Fair Grounds on Friday night. The mare was securely tied for the night and would not have strayed away from her mate without she was driven away. A reward of $10 will be paid for information leading to conviction of parties taking same.

A funny incident occurred at the C. P. R. depot on Monday in which two football players and a well known live stock shipper figured. The live stock shipper carried several chickens for shipment to Calgary but failed to make one of the crates as secure as it might have been. When the agents at the station received them, the bottom fell out of one of the crates and then commeneed one of the funniest chicken scrambles seen for a long time.
The assistant agents at the depot are both football players but it is safe to say that they had a more strenuous time than in any game they ever played, and the stock shipper, who was also present, never played such a game of hide and go seek as he did, especially as he was not used to such exertions.
